

Putting the Pieces Together

Strategic Thinking for School

sharpen skills, learn guessing tricks and reduce anxiety

Fair or not, much of our children's educational success is judged by their performance on standardized, group-administered tests. Students who are familiar with test formats, guessing techniques and timing considerations can better demonstrate their true skills and abilities, thus affording them wider educational opportunities. My students benefit from my extensive training and experience in test construction/norming and by learning strategies appropriate to each different test's nature and intent. I have had tremendous success in preparing students to take the ISEE, CTP-III & IV (ERB), SSAT, PSAT and SAT . Routinely the best performers are those that start early because lasting skills are those that are built upon and reinforced over time. The added benefit is that the skills developed are useful for school performance as well! The small group class (4 to 6 students) schedule is attached; limited individual times are also available.

- o Systematic vocabulary development
- o Essential math concept review
- o Specific question-type practice
- o Written Essay
- o Timing/pacing
- o Guessing strategies appropriate to each question.
